Megan Close Zavala Helps Writers Follow Their Dreams

By Duane Plank

El Segundo's Megan Close Zavala is an avid reader and five-year entrepreneur. She has figured out a way to not only satisfy her love of prose but make money at the same time. Not a bad gig, right, getting paid for something that you would probably pay to do?

Zavala, the founder and owner of Turn the Page Book and Editorial Coaching, gets paid to read, edit, and advise on other people's creations.

Zavala grew up in Silver Spring, Maryland, in what she termed "a book-filled home." She said that both of her parents were "incredibly well-read," mentioning that her father was a "voracious reader." She remembers that growing up, if she posed a question to her father, his stock answer was, "We've got a book on that!" She said that "storytelling has always been a huge part of my life, whether book-related or film-related."

Zavala graduated from the University of Hartford, then sojourned to environs nearby to Tinseltown to chase her dream. She said she was "obsessed with films my whole life" and was "determined to become an Oscar-winning screenwriter," a lofty career goal. She spent a short time as a personal assistant for a producer, also later working in the business and legal affairs department at the E! network.

After toiling in the entertainment industry for most of her 20's, Zavala said that "I realized that the entertainment industry was not where I was destined to be and started looking for my new path."

And that "new path" exploration was jump-started when she met her later-to-be husband Mike while both were living in a Burbank apartment complex. Zavala said that the landlord played matchmaker, and after a few months of dating, Megan and Mike Zavala moved to India, where Mike had been offered a job.

The couple spent a year in India and, when returning stateside, got married, and now have two children. While in India, the couple traveled all over southeast Asia, and Zavala said that she started focusing on her editorial work. She landed a job as an editorial assistant at a literary agency, quickly becoming an agent. She loved her work, Zavala said, but soon realized that because "agenting is 100% commissioned based, I couldn't afford to work with clients who weren't 100% ready to publish and 100% likely to sell." So, she switched gears, started her own editorial services company, and "I haven't looked back. I truly love what I do."

Mike Zavala works in the film industry as a visual effects producer. With many of his jobs centered on the Westside, the Zavala's

Studio Antiques Celebrates 33 Years of Business

By Kiersten Vannest

In the middle of Richmond Street, innocuously tucked behind the 99 Cents Only store, sits an antique store with the apropos name "Studio Antiques" painted on the front. Passing this store, it looks like an average antique shop, with lots of old items and a few treasures if you know what to look for. But behind the doors of this little shop is an antique hunter's dream.

Laurence and Sally Martin own and operate Studio Antiques. If you've ever seen Baggage Wars on the Travel Channel or Storage Wars on A&E, you've seen the Martins hunting, appraising, and obtaining, and selling one-of-a-kind items from all over the world.

Neither of the Martins began their lives in the business of antiques. Laurence grew up in England, becoming a scientific engineering designer and eventually helping to design the black box recorder still used today in airplanes. After that, he spent the next ten years traveling the world as a contractor and working on all things air space. His profession led him to work for Northrop Grumman and landed him right here in El Segundo. One day, on his lunch break, he found a little studio that had a painting shop and framing business. He

Barbara Celeste Ernest

Barbara Celeste Ernest, April 11, 1928 - March 17, 2021. Our beloved mother, grandmother, aunt, cousin, friend and neighbor, passed away on one of her favorite holidays – St. Patrick’s Day. Barbara was born in Los Angeles to Annah Moran and US Army recruiter Henry Moran. She was proud of being an LA girl from John C. Fremont High School who loved LA sunshine and its beaches. She was predeceased by both parents and all of her siblings – Lenora Moran, Henry Moran, Jr., Rosemary Moran, Doreen Riddle, and Jacquelyn Silliman. Barbara met her future husband, Virgil Ernest, at the US Naval Station in China Lake, CA where he was stationed as a Marine and she was working as a civil servant, marrying in 1948. Besides finding each other, they made lifelong friends during their time there as well as at Cal Poly SLO where they lived for four happy years. Then this LA city girl became a farmer’s wife in Tulare CA. Along the way, Barbara and Virgil became parents to ten children. She always said that her life’s goal was to have a large family, and she sure did. Family connections were most important to her. People always knew where Barbara was because she could be heard laughing, claiming to be the instigator of the Ernest family reunions where she made sure her children were going to “know their cousins.” Vacations almost always involved visiting family members around the US. She especially loved Hawaii! Through all of these events and travels, she always had a camera at hand and painstakingly created photo albums of them all, thereby leaving her descendants a huge photographic record of her/their lives.

This LA girl returned to the South Bay when she and Virgil moved to El Segundo in 1966 where she worked as a bookkeeper/office manager for several local businesses. Barbara was a faithful parishioner at St. Anthony Catholic Church, where her children attended school, and was honored a few years ago by the parish for her many years of devotion. •

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I have been a perfectionist my whole life. It has always been a struggle for me but I have been able to handle it. Now I feel like it is too much and I want to let go of it. Is there anything I can do? It feels like I would have to change my personality, and I’m not sure I can do that, or want to do that.

– Perfectly Miserable, El Segundo

Dear Perfectly Miserable,

We celebrate perfect - in sports, like gymnastics and baseball - but also countless other aspects of our lives. Pundits breathlessly hail a “perfect” speech and Instagram lights up at a meal “perfectly” prepared. The list goes on. We are a perfection-loving society. No wonder you’re feeling miserable: while we celebrate “perfection,” we are also quick to jump on mistakes. In the same way that it is so much easier to tear something down than it is to build it up, it is much easier to notice flaws than it is to appreciate the effort and skill that goes into any creation, perfect or not.

I have a few questions and thought experiments that should get you started in considering your next steps.

First, what is perfectionism, to you? When I think about what we commonly consider to be “perfectionism,” I imagine a wide range of possible definitions, for example: a strong dedication to doing the best possible work in a particular craft; feeling intense anxiety because everything you do will harshly scrutinized and judged by others; a sense of knowing what good work is, and that you could always do just a little bit better. But that’s me. When you think about perfectionism as it applies to your life, how would you define it?

Next, what if you think about perfectionism as something - or better yet, someone - you live with, rather than who you are? If you have lived with perfectionism your whole life, it does not seem reasonable to expect that such an old acquaintance will go easily into the night; nor do I think that the total extinction of perfectionism should necessarily be your goal. Is it possible that Perfectionism - let’s go ahead and give him a capital P for a proper name - has been beneficial to you in some ways?

More importantly, how would you describe the voices of Perfectionism? Who are these voices and what supports them? We already mentioned the voices of Perfectionism we are all exposed to when we participate in society. Is Perfectionism’s voice also (I am using the metaphor of a voice but you may prefer a different one) that of an unreasonably demanding parent or teacher or authority figure? Perhaps it is the voice of a friend, or partner, or a childhood bully. The old “know your enemies” adage applies: the better you know the problem, the more effectively you will be able to confront it.

This is not easy, but once you start the process of scrutinizing Perfectionism - turning the tables, you might say - the paths forward may very well begin to reveal themselves.

Poor Customer Service at ESPD Counter

I was recently in the El Segundo Police department's front lobby to pay for two dog licenses. I saw that there was nobody at the front counter but observed a sergeant who appeared to be in casual conversation with someone. Another person was at a different desk and both did all they could to not make eye contact with me. After what seemed like an eternity, but was essentially five or so minutes, I knocked on the window to get someone's attention. After thirty seconds I knocked on the window to get the sergeant's attention.

The traffic sergeant sauntered towards the counter with his disgusted 'I'm better than you attitude' and said, "Can't you see there's nobody here, they'll be right back." Then he snapped, "What do you want, I don't work the front counter." I replied that I was there to pay for dog licenses. This $150K a year sergeant, who couldn't be bothered because he was so busy confabulating with a non-sworn person said, "If you can't wait take a hike!" and walked back to his important conversation.

The mission statement of the El Segundo Police Department is to, "Provide a safe and secure community while treating all people with dignity and respect." This brash sergeant could learn a lesson from PSO #1042 for her attention to duty and apologetic attitude. Neither one of these officers knew that I was retired from law enforcement or an original Executive Board member of the South Bay Police/Fire Memorial Foundation. I wonder if the sergeant knew would his attitude have been different.

In Dancing With the Devil, Demi Lovato Reinvents Herself as a Confident, Queer Woman

Morgan Rojas for cinemacy.com

If the opening night showcase film at this year's SXSW film festival set out to prove anything, it's that sharing our struggles with strangers can be a cathartic and positively-affirming experience. When you're former Disney star/recovering addict/and newly "out" artist Demi Lovato, it can also be quite vulnerable and scary.

Drawing comparisons to the recent New York Times-produced documentary Framing Britney, which revealed a troubling, unacknowledged history of one of the world's most famous pop stars (Britney Spears),

Directed by Michael D. Ratner, Dancing with the Devil joins the ranks of other docs made by former young pop culture icons who want to tell (and own) their stories, including Justin Bieber: Seasons and This is Paris. While Dancing with the Devil is itself, an engaging work, it feels as though its purpose is a thinly veiled beg for forgiveness from her peers and fans. I don't feel like it's my place to judge someone's past and their explanation as to why they did certain things, but the audience's only requirement here is to sit and listen. Demi's hope is that we allow her the chance for a fresh start, Dancing With the Devil, courtesy of YouTube Originals.

Demi Lovato's own story—Dancing with the Devil, now streaming on YouTube—sounds hauntingly similar.

Demi's catapult to stardom first launched as a child in Barney & Friends, then Disney Channel, and quickly led to deep-rooted insecurities, teenage rebellion, and addictions of many kinds. Demi candidly talks about her eating disorders, losing her virginity as a teenager in a sexual assault, and her tumultuous relationship with drugs and alcohol; it's the last topic that is covered most in-depth, and serves as the genesis behind making this film.

Dancing with the Devil shows that this wasn't Demi's first attempt at shooting a documentary to show her struggles. In fact, the initial shoot shut down in 2018 after Demi suffered a near-fatal overdose in which, as she reveals now in the doc, she was mere minutes away from dying. Removing herself from the public eye for a few years to recharge and reset (as well as rest her voice), Demi attributes 2020's forced quarantine with her family and ex-fiancé to keeping her alive. For many, 2020 was a brutal year; but as her family and close friends share in the film, it was the best thing that could have happened to Demi.

and this is her explanation as to why she deserves one.

So, the big question: is the struggle over for Demi Lovato? The film doesn't leave us with a confident answer either way, but one thing it hammers home is that the Demi who is going to reemerge in 2021 is not the same woman we've seen before. This new woman has the power to come out on top, and we should all be rooting for her much-deserved comeback. •

Seasons Start for Eagles

By Gregg McMullin

Finally, after over four hundred days since the El Segundo high school football team played their last game, they played their first game. The baseball team's wait to play was a mere 375 days since their last game. Both teams embraced their season openers with anticipation, a little nervousness, and plenty of zeal for their favorite sport. The results weren't favorable in either team's opener, but both head coaches weren't too concerned for the loss.

Coach Green Finds Positives in Football Loss

First-year head coach Shawn Green's debut, went as positive as it could have when you sum up all that his team had to face. First, they were on the road playing at South Torrance High, which is notorious for its brisk evenings and strong cold winds. The Eagles were facing a team that had won a CIF Championship and had a number of starting returnees from that team. Finally, Coach Green's team had a limited number of days to prepare for what amounts to a five-game season.

The Eagles were prepared and played well, but mistakes overtook them at times, and they fell 21-8.

The South Torrance Spartans had some key returnees from their CIF title run, including Kade Jones. Jones was converted from receiver to quarterback this season. He scrambled for 97 yards and three touchdowns while completing 5-7 passes for 37 yards.

The Spartans took advantage of two first-quarter Eagle mistakes in the first quarter to take a 14-0 lead. El Segundo opened the game with a long drive that ended with an interception. The Spartans reversed the field and scored on a 22-yard run by Jones. On the Eagle's next possession, a muffed snap gave the Spartans the ball at the El Segundo 1-yard line. Two plays later, Jones scored again. The Spartans took a 21-0 lead midway through the second quarter on another long run by Jones.

El Segundo's offense kicked in and drove to the South Torrance 2-yard line. Junior quarterback Conor Hochberg then ran it in for the score. He connected with James Pearson for the two-point conversion to make it 21-8. The second half saw the two teams fighting the elements but came up empty on the scoreboard.

It was a typical first game with plenty of mistakes and plenty of positives to build on. The offensive line played solid, the defense played with a passion, but the execution on some plays showed a lapse. Coach Green was subdued and positive afterward, knowing this is just the start of his coaching career. "They played with energy, and they fought hard, and that's my number one take away from this game, Green said.

The Eagles travel to North Torrance Friday at 7 p.m. to face a good Saxon team. The Eagles home opener is next Friday at 7 p.m.

Stolnack Helps Ignite Win with Homerun

The El Segundo baseball team started play in the 53rd Stevenson/El Segundo Tournament and split their first two games. In the season opener, the Eagles fell 4-1 to the Palos Verdes Sea Kings and then turned around to defeat Long Beach Wilson 8-7 in ten innings.

In the opener, Brendan McAndrews singled and later scored on Julian Rodriguez's double in the first inning to give the Eagles a 1-0 lead. It would be the only runs El Segundo would score, but it wasn't for the lack of opportunities. The Eagles wound up leaving ten runners on base, including five in scoring position. The Sea Kings sent six different pitchers to the mound to stop the Eagles, who had six hits.

The Sea Kings tied the game in the third inning when Jayden Camel singled and scored on Gavin Peters' RBI single to make it 1-1. In the fifth, Peters reached on an error and later scored on Christos Tsangaris' RBI single. P.V. scored two more in the sixth on Will Mashy's two-run single to make it 4-1.

El Segundo faced the LB Wilson Bruins in the second game that stretched into the ten innings that spanned over three hours. In the end, it was poor fielding on the Bruins part began to purchase items, putting them on layaway to reserve them for himself.

“One day [the shop owner] said to me, ‘You’ve got like twenty things on layaway, when are you going to pay for them?’” says Martin. After a couple of beers and some lighthearted discussion, the shop owner asked him if he’d just buy the shop. So Laurence did. This purchase became Studio Antiques, named for its predecessor.

While he handles most of the buying and packaging, Sally, his wife, handles more of the business side of things, a complement to each other. While working a 9 to 5 corporate job, she began helping out with the business on the weekends, which eventually turned into her full-time gig. With her master’s degree and organization skills, she most often runs the shop daily, makes friends with customers, and keeps the books in check.

“I needed a secretary, and Sally fit the bill,” jokes Laurence, immediately rebuked by Sally.

“He only says that at the right moment because he knows it makes me angry,” she laughs.

Both of them are avid historians. Their extensive experience, along with the help of friends, who are experts in the field, allows them to provide appraisals as part of their services and helps them get valuable items for their shop, which also operates online.

A myriad of odd, eclectic, and valuable items have passed through their collection, from a rare pressing of a Beatles album released on their first trip to America for the Ed Sullivan show, to a memo sent out by John Adams suggesting that Washington’s birthday should be made a national holiday (of which there are only five known copies in the world).

These days, while antiques are still the name of their game, they’ve had a mass customer interest in vinyls.

“I’ll tell you, this is my personal opinion,” says Sally to explain the recent resurgence of vinyl enthusiasts, “In the late 1800s, there was a movement called the Arts and Crafts movement, and it was a reaction to the industrial revolution.” She goes on to explain that this movement was an artisan rebuttal to factory lines and automated jobs. People began hand-making and designing interiors and items amid the availability of mass-produced consumer products.

“Well, I think in this century, everything is digital, and you don’t have to have anything physical,” she says, saying that she believes there is a surge in vinyl sales “because now you can hold something. You can read the liner notes. You can play it from beginning to end.” In addition, listening to an entire album is often an event to be done together with others, something we’ve had very little of in the last year.

After thirty-three years in business, they say their inventory has come from all over. Laurence used to travel to places like France, Australia, and China and buy items to be shipped back to the shop for stock. They scour estate sales, get calls about lots, and look in unclaimed baggage. Also, since landing their reality shows, they have customers come in from all over and donate items, get appraisals, or list their items on eBay through them. By being close to the airport, their customer base is a global community.

Something the couple is very attuned to is family sensitivity. Often, items are donated to them after the loss of a family member or an elderly family has moved into assisted living and needs to downsize.

“We deal with a lot of people who are experiencing loss, especially right now, and it’s something that we try to be sensitive about, too,” says Laurence. They appreciate all their items greatly, and even if they don’t want an item for their stock, they help give advice on finding it the right home.

“You might think this is strange, but I’m a little bit psychic,” he says, “and some of the customers who pass on... I think they’re up there, and they direct their family to bring this stuff to us because they know that we’re gonna be really fair.”

Currently, they run their show called “Around the Bend” on YouTube, interviewing interesting subjects and talking about antiques. In the back of their shop, they have what they affectionately call the Ghost Town. It’s a series of sheds constructed from reclaimed wood that used to comprise an 1860s cabin in Big Bear. As things open back up, they are looking to the future and hoping to hold small concert events with their vinyls in the Ghost Town to bring the community together and talk about old things with new friends. •

The Martins say they have over 20,000 vinyls for sale in their shop.

that gave the Eagles the 8-7 win. The victory against Wilson was marred by mistakes by both teams. You could chalk it up to an early-season lapse of practice time due to current conditions.

The Eagles took an early 3-0 lead in the first inning. They combined two hits and took advantage of two errors to score their runs that were highlighted by a two-run double by Kenny Chung. The Bruins responded with a four-run second inning. They took advantage of two walks that both ended up scoring to take a 4-3 lead. The Bruins stretched their lead with a three-run fourth inning for a 7-3 lead.

In the bottom of the fourth, Brendan

McAndrews drew a walk and scored on a fielder’s choice to make it 6-4. In the fifth inning, Cooper Stolnack singled and came around to score on a wild pitch to cut the deficit to 6-5. In the seventh inning, the Eagles, who had missed out on opportunities to score, leaned on Stolnack, who hit a 1-0 fastball 385 feet to tie the game and send the game into extra innings.

The Eagles sent five pitchers to the mound. Kenny Chung came in relief and faced ten batters striking out seven. Chung was lifted after the seventh inning, and Luke Elward threw a scoreless eighth inning. In the ninth inning, Max Dering took over and had to overcome a bases loaded jam to induce an inning-ending ground ball. The Eagles went quietly in their half of the ninth, setting up a wild tenth inning.

Bruins leadoff batter Brett Abudayyeh singled and scored on an infield ground ball to give his team a 7-6 lead. It would be the only run they would score, but it could’ve been a bigger inning. A baserunning snafu by DJ Erkman getting caught in a rundown third base and home plate prevented another scoring opportunity. With two outs and runners on second and third base, Dering struck out Davis Ramage to stop the damage.

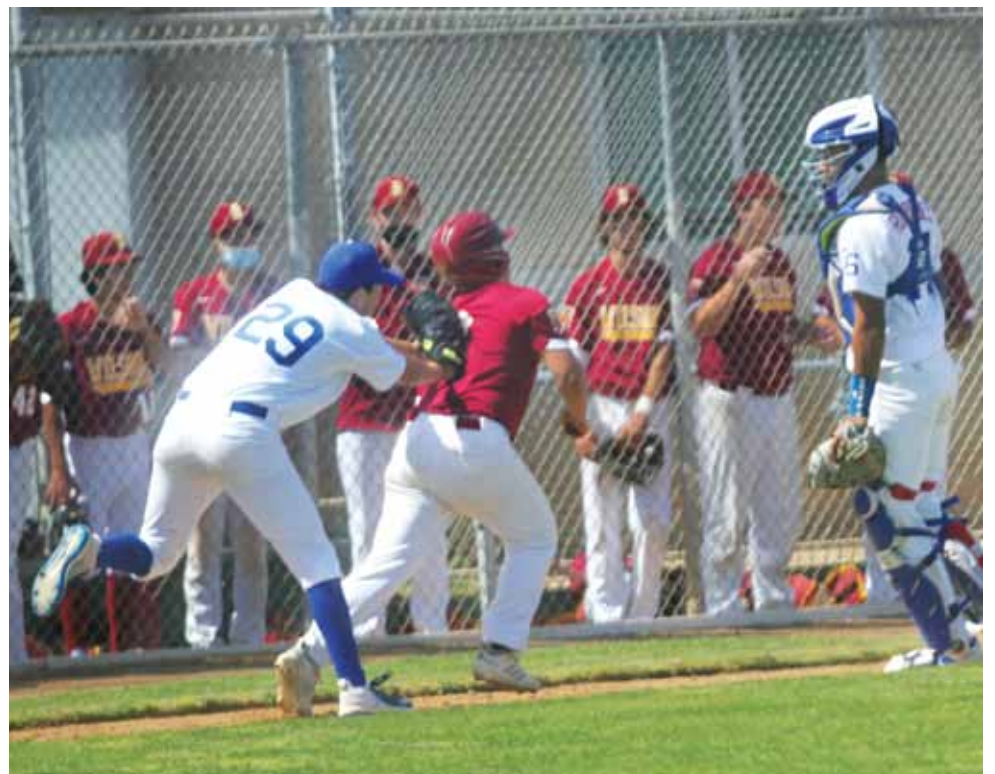

With one out in the bottom half of the tenth inning, Eddie Grant had a pinch-hit single.

Marquise Wright reentered the game to run for Grant, and McAndrews drew a walk. Wright scored on Evan Smith’s single to tie the game. With one out and McAndrews on third and Smith on first base, Julian Rodriguez hit a routine ground ball to Abudayyeh, who fed Erkman at second base. Erkman’s throw to first was in the dirt and couldn’t be fielded by first baseman AJ Castano. The Eagles celebrated the win when McAndrews scored the decisive run.

The Eagles continued tournament play this week with three games, including an away game at Bishop Montgomery on Tuesday and teams TBA today and Saturday. They host Peninsula next Tuesday at 6 p.m. •

looked for digs a bit closer to where the jobs were to lessen the crummy L.A. commute. Mike suggested that they explore finding a place in El Segundo. Megan, being the East-coaster, did not know much about El Segundo, other than it was the home of the Mattel headquarters and was located south of LAX. She remembers thinking: "Why would we move by the airport? I don't understand?"

Zavala has not regretted relocating to El Segundo, a city she calls "a magical place, a hidden gem," where their family has added two young children to the mix. "We love it here so much."

Throughout her career, Zavala has worked for and with many creative and talented people, including top literary agent Wendy Keller,

Keller, who Zavala cites as her publishing mentor and former boss in the literary agent world, emailed that "Sometimes, you meet someone in one context, and it burgeons into a friendship. When Megan and I first started working together in my office in Marina del Rey, I could tell right away that she was unusually smart and easy to get along with. What I did not expect was for her to become someone I care about so much! Over pizza "staff lunches" – with just the two of us – we got to know one another, and I heard about her romance with Mike, the man who is now her husband. I even got invited to the wedding! When she was pregnant with her first child, we would laugh that we were planning to set up a bassinet in our small office so that we could tend the baby and still work side by side. We have kept up our friendship and a new iteration of our work together all these years. I consider Megan an incredibly dear, kind-hearted, competent and intelligent woman."

"When Megan came to work with me, she was already knowledgeable about screenplays and books. She had a broad interest in the publishing industry. My company specializes in selling only nonfiction books, usually to major US publishers – Simon and Schuster, HarperCollins, Penguin Random House, etc. This was a different part of the business than Megan had worked in before. Her adaptation was incredibly quick! She not only completed the things mandated by her job, but rapidly understood how those tasks connected to the whole and began filling in gaps I didn't even know were there!"

Zavala has developed a stable of satisfied clients over the past few years.

Rob Sullivan is one of Zavala's editorial/coaching clients. When he was casting about, searching for someone to help with his manuscript, he found Zavala. "I always trust my intuition," Sullivan said. "There is something about her; I wanted to work with her." Zavala helped Sullivan put together his manuscript proposal. He noted two facets of Zavala's work that stand out. "She (was) very honest," he said when she evaluated his manuscript proposal, as well as edit the manuscript.

"The thing that I love about her the most is how open she was and helping me to add other people's stories to my book," which, Sullivan said, was able to give validity to some of his book chapters.

Another Zavala client, Joel B., has worked with Zavala for four years. "I worked with Megan on a book I wrote about digital marketing," he emailed. "I developed a work plan and had Megan review each chapter and provide feedback along the way. She also conducted a full review of the manuscript before I submitted it to my publisher. She was a pleasure to work with, highly knowledgeable, and able to learn the new subject matter very quickly. It was a great experience."

Zavala said that Ben Larracey is another of her editorial/coaching clients and has been familiar with her work "from my very early entertainment industry days." Emailed Larracey: "I first met Megan in 2006 when we were both interns at Kopelson Entertainment.

"Meg and I read and wrote coverage on screenplays that came in. This company had walls of scripts that needed to be read—like thousands. So, we would read scripts and see if it (they were) right for the company.

"Meg knows scripts and stories inside out: the beats, character movements, overall plot. She is great at it. Probably seen a million movies and read even more books."

Anjanette Fennell is also a Zavala client, as well as a fellow book coach editor. "Over the years," Fennell emailed, "she has helped as a trusted friend and colleague in what can sometimes feel like a crazy industry (publishing). As an independent agent and coach, I can often feel alone in business, and it is our regular chats about life and all things literary that help me get clarity and connection. Of course, she has also become the first person I think of when wanting an insightful, considered and thorough editor."

Not surprisingly, when Zavala is not getting paid to read, she enjoys reading for pleasure, especially mysteries and thrillers, and said that she regards the novel Prince of Tides written by Pat Conroy as her favorite book. Zavala's other favorite authors include James Ellroy, Jane Harper, and Tana French.

An avid film buff, Zavala, like many of the rest of us, is looking forward to the time when she can enjoy the full movie-going experience in theatres again. She cited the Harrison Ford vehicle The Fugitive as well as the brilliant 1976 dark, satirical comedy-drama Network, written by Paddy Chayefsky, as two of her all-time favorite films.

Zavala said that the best part of her job is "getting to read for a living, and helping people achieve their dreams." On the flip side, Zavala says it can sometimes be challenging when a client "doesn't take my advice" while moving through the writing and publishing process, even though the client has presumably hired Zavala to tap into her literary expertise.

All in all, no complaints, Zavala said. "I can live in a world of books for fun and work... I am so grateful!"

To steal a phrase from an old Frank Sinatra ditty, circa 1937, composed by George Gershwin, "nice work if you can get it, and you can get it, if you try." •

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF JOHN EDWARD METCALFE CASE NO. 21STPB02555

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of JOHN EDWARD METCALFE.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by SHAWNA METCALFE GIBSON in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that SHAWNA METCALFE GIBSON be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The WILL and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 04/30/21 at 8:30AM in Dept. 79 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS

Purrrfect Companions

Hansel

Every second of every minute of every day, a helpless animal is put to death just because no one was there to take them home. Give them a second chance for love when you adopt one of these precious kitties.

Hansel is a gentle, handsome Maine Coon mix boy. He is quietly playful yet loves a good slow wrestle with his favorite feline buddy Billy the Kit. These two boys are quite the pair, and we would love for them to stay together. However, we will consider Hansel going to a home with a playful cat looking for a friend. Hansel is somewhat shy until he gets to know you. That is why another cat will help him acclimate. Hansel is very sweet, enjoys being brushed, and will give you his tummy to rub.

Billy the Kit is such a character! We call him the class president here at the Adoption Center. He is always the most popular among the kitties who he mentors to help them feel comfortable. Billy is also great at helping around the office. He will retrieve your freshly printed paper in a sort of readable state. But Billy is so cute when he runs to the printer and paws at the paper coming out. Billy is a great cat, and he loves Hansel like a brother! The two of them are often seen lying face to face and taking turns bopping each other on the head. We would love to see them adopted together, but we could also see Billy being comfortable with your resident playful cat. Billy the Kit needs to have another kitty in his forever home.

Dot is a friendly, easy-going kitty. She gets along with cats, people, and her ideal home would have a cat-friendly dog or two, as she is especially fond of small dogs. Dot enjoys playing with the feather on a stick toy and she is a Temptations treat junkie! An outgoing kitty, Dot likes to chat with you about her thoughts on things and would love to be in a home that she can call her own.

Libby was dumped in a carrier at one of our adoption venues. When she first arrived, she had an abundance of fortitude, and we were not sure how socialized to people she was. It turns out that all Libby needed was time to decompress; she is now happy to accept pets and attention. Libby is a beautiful cat looking for her forever home. She is tolerant of other cats and has even been seen napping with a few of her friends. We think that Libby will have a longer adjustment arc in a new home, so she will need to be adopted into a patient, quiet home.

Shiegra and Nook Nook are two sisters named after magical creatures from a Christmas story by L. Frank Baum (OZ). Shiegra is a lioness, brave, beautiful, and attentive. Nook Nook is a sweet, silly sprite that is playful, mischievous, and mysterious like all fairy folk. Shiegra is the more confident of the two sisters. She'll jump all over you, preparing for a sneak attack on Nook Nook or an unsuspecting ping pong ball. She loves to cuddle and will purr loudly to let you know. Shiegra loves pets, kisses, and scratches with her head and tail held high! Her favorite toys are the cheap and easy ones—scrunched up pieces of paper, corks, bottle caps, and anything that skitters and skids when she whacks it. Nook Nook is a goofy little girl with a funny grumpy face and a misleading mustache.

She is a little timid, but once in your arms, she is quick to purr and will melt in happy snuggles if you promise to keep her safe. These sisters are very well balanced and take their playtime seriously. They horseplay like gladiators and snuggle like angels. They can only be adopted as a pair and will not be separated. They are great with other cats, but not a good match for homes with young children or dogs. The girls have sensitive stomachs and require a special diet.

Blue is one of the last Giving Tuesday rescues from our Clear the Shelter Day.

When we got Blue, her shelter notes indicated she was feral, and everything about her behavior confirmed that. Then, over the weeks, something wonderful happened. Blue started to respond to human contact, began purring and vocalizing, and became a love bug! She loves pets, cuddles, burrowing under the covers, and much, much human attention! Blue was not feral at all, just scared. This young beauty can go to a home with cats (or dogs), but can also be adopted as a solo cat. Loving humans, it turns out, is her jam!

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations.

Temporarily, adoption events are suspended. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org.

With our city and state shut down, we are faced with the delicate balance to protect our fellow humans from the spread of COVID-19, while continuing our mission of saving the most vulnerable victims of the homeless cat crisis. We know that these are challenging times for everyone. If you can give a little, it will go a long way. They are still counting on us during these difficult times. Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Blvd. #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

Saving one animal won't change the world, but the world will surely change for that animal. •

Happy Tails

Julian has found his home and we are overjoyed! When we rescued Julian from the shelter he was hissing and swatting in his cage. Sadly, he had been assessed as under-socialized by the shelter staff. We placed him in a foster home with one of our best socializers, Janice. Janice gave him a small space at first, so he would feel safe. She talked to him, offered him food and treats and slowly gained his trust until Julian allowed her to pet him.

Janice discovered that Julian was an emotional boy who did not like other cats. Once she knew what type of home Julian needed, she set out to find the right home for him. When Julian's new dad contacted her, she told him what to expect for the first few days and how to gain Julian's trust. Julian's new dad listened to her advice, and now Julian is enjoying his best life.

Many people are willing to foster kittens, but we are in short supply of foster parents for timid or emotional cats. The truth is that these are the cats that need us the most. They do not do well in a shelter environment and very few people understand them. We can attest that there is nothing more rewarding than gaining the trust of a cat like Julian, watching them blossom, then finding them their human.

If you can find room in your home and your heart to foster cats with emotional needs, please fill out our foster application at this link: <https://kittenrescue.org/volunteer/foster-application>

When you adopt a "pet without a partner", you will forever make a difference in their life and they are sure to make a difference in yours. •

Congratulations to Julian and his new family.
